Maya became the Assistant Director of International Admission at Concordia University-Portland in February of 2016 but has been a part of the Concordia University-Portland community since 2012. Maya received her Master of Arts in International Development and Service from Concordia University-Portland in May of 2014. Through that program, she had the opportunity to work and study in China, Italy, and Thailand, which has allowed her to develop a deeper understanding of what international students go through when making the choice to study internationally.

Maya is also on the executive team for Study Oregon, a state consortia that aids international students in finding quality education and training in the state of Oregon. Maya has also done research and given presentations on the effectiveness of social media in creating global community on campus.

About Concordia University-Portland

Concordia University-Portland is a Christian University preparing leaders for the transformation of society. We do this through rigorous course work, Lutheran values and servant leadership.

Concordia University-Portland welcomes diverse perspectives in an environment of open discourse and academic freedom. With the support of its community of family, friends, mentors, business partners, and donors, Concordia Portland hosts 1,100 students on campus from over 30 different states and 24 different countries and 5,200 online students taking course from all over the country and world. All of these students come together and thrive in a Christian environment that's challenging, motivating, and inclusive. Something that makes Concordia Portland special is the fact that 100% of undergraduate students participate in some sort of service work while studying. These experiences give students the tools they need to be effective global citizens and leaders.

Concordia University-Portland is located in the state of Oregon just north of California and south of Washington. Concordia University-Portland has been a cornerstone of its northeast Portland neighborhood since 1905. Its friendly, tree-lined campus is ideally located – just minutes from downtown Portland where students can experience some of the best art, shopping and food the United States has to offer. Students who have a spirit for adventure can ski on Mt. Hood, hike and wind-surf in the Columbia Gorge, or hit the beach at the Oregon Coast in 90 minutes. It's no wonder Portland is consistently ranked among the most livable cities in the USA.
